Blair Athol is fast becoming the 'in suburb' – representing great value and sitting on the doorstep of Prospect this area has seen a surge in demand. Tree lined streets and a blend of mostly post war Art Deco, Austerity and Conventional homes means this area appeals to home buyers looking for inner city character with affordable value. Traditional allotment with generous frontages also makes Blair Athol the perfect location for developers to ply their skills. With close proximity to the city and an abundance of great local shopping, transport and a selection of both private and government schools this area is hard to surpass.

Donald Street is located in the city end of the suburb and is accessed off Clifton Street. The property itself is set on the high side of the road with a westerly aspect, with views to the Port Adelaide. On an allotment of some 57' by 150' (17.37 by 45.72) subdivision is considered profitable and probable (SCC).

The home presents well and with generous room sizes and high ceilings plus beautifully polished floors. The property truly reflects build pedigree and retains many of the features one would expect in a 1950's Austerity home.
